PARLIAMENT PRIZE RIPPLES

Mr DIMOPOULOS (Oakleigh) (09:57:20): We are incredibly lucky to sit in this place and have the opportunity to speak our minds, because there is no shortage of smart minds and good ideas outside this Parliament. I was reminded of that when watching members statements video submissions for the Parliament Prize from students at Murrumbeena Primary School. What an amazing group of students. Statements were carefully researched and delivered with real passion. Alexis Liew spoke about closing the pay gap and equal pay for women. Alyvia Liew thinks it is about time we started to protect endangered species. Chantelle Williams also raised the gender pay gap, domestic violence and the declining number of male teachers. Eric Tran spoke of fossil fuels and global warming and the need to invest in sustainable energy sources. Evelyn Marcou raised the excessive use of plastics in our everyday lives, including in supermarkets. Hridya Kozhumal Chattdi wants to see a ban on the cruel practice of animal testing. Lakshithaa Ravindran wants our earth to be safe in the future and to put an end to coal mining. Maithili Lal spoke about the gender pay gap and protecting our natural environment. Maleesha Dharmadasa is concerned about the outsourcing of Australian industry and wants to see more local investment. Sophia Bromley believes pollution is a disaster, taxes should be placed on polluting industries and funding increased for pollution-related illnesses. Sophia Davis would also like to see an end to inhumane animal testing, arguing that we should seek alternatives. Tessa Torok wants to change laws to keep us safe and clean, including tougher laws against littering and drink-driving. Thank you to all the students, I am very impressed. And thank you to teachers Caitlin Callanan and Natalie Beach, who should be very proud of the work they do with these terrific kids at Murrumbeena Primary School.
